Jason Aamodt is the founding member of the Indian and Environmental Law Center, a mid-western law firm specializing in water rights, land damages, Indian law, and toxic tort litigation.

Among notable cases, the Tenth Circuit created a new cause of action in one of Mr. Aamodt's Indian trust accounting cases.

Mr. Aamodt obtained certification of the first geographically defined toxic tort class in Oklahoma.

The National Law Journal Ranked one of Aamodt's jury verdicts as one of the top-100 verdicts in the United States in 2013.

Mr. Aamodt is published in numerous journals, with 2016 publications by Routledge Press (Energy Justice) and Edinburgh Press (Water Law).
